

COVID-19 RESPONSE TRACKER

THE SOUTHERN AFRICA TRUST COLLATED RESPONSES
TO THE COVID-19 PANDEMIC BY CIVIL SOCIETY
ORGANISATIONS FROM SADC REGION AND BEYOND

More burden of care is shifted towards women in households and communities.

- Women are leading the health response making up 70% of the healthcare workforce, also exposing them to the greatest risk of infection.
- Most small-scale food producers are women. There is increased potential risk of gender-based violence during this pandemic. However, very little is being done to address women empowerment.

TRENDS

- Stigmatisation, discrimination against foreign nationals as well as locals who are suspected of having Covid-19 virus prevalent, resulting in assault, abuse and service denial
- COVID-19 containment measures spur increases in perceptions of shortages to basic needs because of disruption to normal work leading to increased crime
- Beyond the health crisis, COVID 19 has set the world in a worse economic and social catastrophe than the 2008 global economic crisis particularly for vulnerable people
- Long-lasting effects from job losses and related fears particularly in the informal economies, leaving people with no means to sustain themselves now and beyond the pandemic
- Time to leapfrog into the fourth Industrial revolution with schools forced to close and adopt e-learning as a mode of education
- Covid-19 is disrupting supply chains across all industries and sectors disrupting economies and the social fabric of many countries
